Aspirante Foundation Announces ABLE100 Campaign to Give Away 100 Free Software Licences

Fran Killoway, Chairman of the Aspirante Foundation announced today that the Foundation will be giving away 100 free software licences to people living with specific disabilities in the Greater Sydney area.

"We are excited to be able to share this software with members of our community living with disability. Through ABLE100, we want to open up communication, remove frustration and make a difference by providing tools which can assist with the everyday tasks which can become extremely challenging and overwhelming when living with disability," said Killoway.

ABLE100 is a pilot program which will target specific users with disabilities including amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) and motor neurone disease (MND), advanced stages of Multiple Sclerosis (MS), Parkinson's disease, muscular dystrophy or those suffering from the effects of stroke.

CALL TO ACTION: If you, or someone you know is living with or caring for someone with these disabilities, please visit www.aspirantefoundation.org to download and submit the ABLE100 form. The Foundation will assess your suitability and respond to you directly.

Information on the capacity of the software, Fran Killoway and the Aspirante Foundation is available in the attached backgrounder.
